SURPRISE PARTY.

Hans Anderson, one of the popular business men of this city was surprised by a number of friends upon the event of his forty third birthday Wednesday of last week. He was called home from his business on the pretext of a game of cards and upon his arrival found the guests assembled. They presented him with a large rocking chair. Refreshments were served and the guests remained till a late hour after wishing Mr. Anderson many birthdays.

RELIGION AT STATE UNIVERSITIES.

When the State University began to assume importance in western educational circles, the friends of the denominational colleges which had sprung up in numbers in every state found it profitable to set forth in warning words the dangers which attended residence at a seat of learning under the control of some other body than a board of trustees all members of a particular church. They even had a story of a chapel service at one of the ungodly institutions, where, after a painful silence, one of the professors upon the platform rose and said, "The praying professor is absent today and there will be no chapel this morning."

It has been interesting to note how the religious life of the State institutions has developed, as a wider horizon has made the limitations of denominationalism less conspicuous. In many places guild houses have been established under the auspices of particular churches, to serve as rallying places for the members of that denomination in the university, presided over by heads who give their whole time to the religious interests of these students, and making powerful adjuncts to the work of the Young Men's Christian Association and the corresponding organization in the interests of women.

The right man at the head of one of these houses is able to do much for the persons whom he desires to serve. He keeps in touch with the pastor of the home church from which the student came, as well as with that of the church in the college town. He makes his guild house a home where students may come in times of special need. There may not be that aggressive denominationalism which too often asserts itself unduly in the small institution traditionally attached to a particular sect, but the influences are wholesome and the opportunities for good are many.

It is entirely likely that the Wisconsin clergyman who made the recent attack upon the religious life at Madison did not mean to imply that the whole body of students was coated with a "religious veneer," striking as that phrase is and much as it expresses the spiritual condition of thousands of people of this generation. What he seems to have had in mind was the need for some sort of a religious establishment under the auspices of his own denomination. In working toward this he probably used stronger terms than were justified by the facts in the case. Considering the increasing influence which the State universities are steadily gaining it is desirable that every force which works for character and fits for usefulness should be encouraged. It is entirely unlikely that distinct religious influences are allowed to have control at any university in this day when personal religion, even if it be thinly veneered, is counted of much worth to character.—Chicago Tribune.

DEATHS.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pecor died Sunday.

The three months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Rold died last week. The child was sick about a week with severe cold. The funeral was held from the house Sunday.

Harold, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Brown passed away Tuesday night after a brief illness. The little fellow has never been rugged and it was hoped that last winter at San Antonio, Texas, would restore his health. He did seem better until two weeks ago when he was confined to his bed but his condition was not considered serious until a few days ago. The neighbors and friends will miss the familiar little figure, for he was always out of doors when the weather would permit. The funeral will be held Friday.

TALKS OF THE PROSPERITY OF NORTHERN CITIES.

Mayor Fred Anderle of Rhinelander, Wis., returned Monday in this city.

The mayor was returning home from a business trip in the southern part of the state. While in this city he found time to make this office a pleasant call.

"I note," said Mr. Anderle, "that Tomahawk is looking bright ahead. The city certainly strikes an outsider as being very prosperous."

"But, as a matter of fact all our northern towns are good and unless a man is a pessimist he can readily see this. Up in Rhinelander things are in a flourishing condition. We have several large manufacturing institutions and are bidding for more. This season the city paved fifteen blocks with macadam and twelve more will be paved next year. A $20,000.00 ward school building was also built this year.—The Tomahawk.

GARY & DANIELSON.

ORDER OF ROOSEVELT A LA FOLLETTE VICTORY.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—The decision of the president to withdraw from entry, under the land laws, all the public coal lands not already taken up, is considered here to be a great victory for Senator La Follette.

He started a fight in the last congress against railroad corporation acquiring any further interest in mineral lands. He based this upon a provision in the Indian appropriation bill permitting the leasing of valuable coal lands to railroads in Indian territory. He characterized the provision as a "snake." So determined was his opposition that a resolution was finally adopted directing the secretary of the interior to investigate land holdings in that territory and report to Congress in December.

It is understood that agents of the geological survey have already been sent into the field to determine the extent and value of coal lands in the western states. Their report will enable the president to act with a full understanding of the subject.—Free Press.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

Love in a Motor-Car.

By RALPH HENRY BARBOUR.

Hubbard shifted to the low speed and drew up in front of the hotel steps. There was a lively outburst already, but Hubbard shouted it out of the way and took his place at the entrance. Hubbard's sole companion, Billy Stone, climbed out of the car carefully and sprang up the steps.

As Hubbard calmly lit a cigarette a very charming voice rippled from the steps. He glanced around, prepared, in fact, rather anxious, to have his senses roused by visions of feminine loveliness, and he was not disappointed. A girl all in white came down the steps. At the lowest step she turned and Hubbard saw that she was accompanied by two older ladies.

"You and Annie had better sit back, Mrs. Perry," directed the girl in a rippling voice. "I'm going to get in front."

Hubbard started. Around to the back wheel the train. Billy Stone had left the door open and he climbed the stoupest of the three. It speaks well for Hubbard's presence of mind that he was out on the ground like a shot and was helping the second of the elderly pair into the car before the exhaust had changed three.

"Where to, please, miss?" asked Hubbard, trying to look as much like a chauffeur as possible.

"Didn't they tell you at the station?" she asked, settling herself in the front seat by his side. "We want to go over to Magnolia to the Oceanview."

"I thought it was Magnolia," he said promptly, as the car shot forward, missed the telegraph pole by three inches and shot down the hill, "but I like to be sure, you know."

"You needn't think I'm frightened. I've gone twice as fast as this old car ever could go, but I don't like hills."

"Well, for a lively car, miss, this one can hike along quite smartly," he said, deferentially. "And when we get over on the Magnolia road I'll let her put, if you like."

"Thank you," she answered indifferently, wondering the while why she should want to make a good impression on this chauffeur, and feeling rather contemptible because she did.

"I should like to see what it can do," she said, leaning forward. "Really, he didn't look the least bit in the world like a hired motor car man, she thought. And he had three awfully interesting looking rings on his sun-burned hands. Then, too, he was frightfully handsome, with stunning features and steady eyes and an expression that suggested calm fearlessness, capability and—yes, positively—audacity.

She dropped her eyes, felt a blush creeping into her cheeks and broke into rather facetious questions as to the process of drying and salting fish. He didn't know a great deal about it himself, but what he told her was undoubtedly interesting even if it sometimes ran wide of the facts. By the time they were rumbling through Gloucester each was very much interested in the other.

At the Oceanview, to the crowded veranda of which fashionable hostelry he swung up daintily at break-neck speed, the ladies alighted and he was instructed to wait for them while they made a call.

An hour later—when they had threaded their way skillfully down the drive—the asked:

"Have you been doing this long?" "Doing—?" "Running automobiles," she explained.

"Oh, yes, I have—about three years." "Are you—are you making a profession of it?"

"Well, to an extent, yes," he replied; at least that was about his mother's idea of it, he reflected amusedly.

She asked questions about the machine, and Hubbard did his best to be interesting, and was so successful that when they were once inhaling the aroma of drying fish she was almost sorry.

"I wish," he ventured when the car was in sight, "if you would allow me to take you out again before long. You see, there's lots worth seeing."

She turned and held a hurried consultation with the others. Then, "Could you come for us to-morrow afternoon?" she asked.

"Yes, miss. At what time?" She agreed to say two.

Billy's eye, but Billy wouldn't look. What did it mean?

"The others aren't coming to-day," said Miss Carson. "And so you can drive it as fast as you like. Can't he, Billy?"

"Certainly," answered Billy, but without enthusiasm. Hubbard ground his teeth over that "Billy." It sounded so very chummy! He bowed and held out his hand to help her into the front seat, but she drew back, stifling a little smile, and:

"I shall sit back to-day," she said, with dignity. "Come on, Billy."

Well, they went to Rockport and they came home again. It was a very uninteresting ride.

When they rolled into Gloucester Miss Carson asked him to stop at one of the stores for a moment. She alighted and Billy announced his intention of seeking a book store and buying some magazines. Hubbard felt instinctively that he had gone for candy. He waited glumly. But almost instantly Miss Carson returned.

"They haven't got what I want," she said, despairingly.

"If you will get in," said Hubbard, "I will take you to another store around the corner. They have everything there."

"But Mr. Stone?" "Well, come back for him."

"Well, all right," she consented. As they passed the next corner there was a hall and Hubbard had a fleeting glimpse of Billy Stone, his arms piled high with packages.

"Isn't the store a long way off?" she inquired uneasily, when they had left the main street and were speeding up a hill.

"Some little distance," answered Hubbard.

"Where are we going, please?" she asked presently, with cold dignity.

"Antiquary. It's about three miles over here. It's very interesting, Miss Carson."

"Mr. Hubbard?" "Yes, but he didn't look around."

"I want you to turn instantly and go back to Gloucester!"

"Not until you've promised to go out riding with me the day after to-morrow and every second day thereafter during your stay here and in the mountains."

"What! Are you crazy?" "No, Miss Carson, not at all."

"Then what do you mean?" she demanded, "by asking me such a thing? Take me home at once. If you don't I shall call for help."

Hubbard stirred uneasily. She was taking it much worse than he had expected her to. Something was wrong somewhere.

"The idea!" she continued scathingly. "I shall report you to your employer!"

He turned and looked at her in bewilderment.

"My employer?" "Certainly. I shall tell them at the stable how you have forcibly compelled me to listen to your insults and—"

"I beg your pardon, but hasn't Billy told you?"

"Billy? Mr. Stone? Told me what?" she asked more quickly, somewhat impressed by his expression and manner.

"Miss Carson, I'm going to make a clean breast of it and throw myself on your mercy," he said. And he did so, to her mingled confusion and mirth. When he had finished:

"And Billy told me that he?" she asked, thoughtfully.

"Well, Billy wasn't taking any chances."

"What do you mean?" she asked, innocently.

"I mean that Billy didn't want anyone to help him at his job."

"Job? What job?"

"Admiring you, Miss Carson."

"Oh! I—now can't we turn back?"

"Of course. I have your promise!"

"Don't be foolish!"

"But have I?"

"Mr. Hubbard, it is very, very late."

"And it's getting later."

"You're awfully mean!"

"And I'm getting meaner." He turned and surveyed a smile on her lips.

"You're awfully silly—and stubborn," she laughed.

"Well, I'm stubborn. I'll grant you. And unless you want to see Antiquary from top to bottom, and portions of Bay View, and Lanesville, and—"

"Oh, stop, please! I—I promise!"

The machine stopped instantly.

"Thank you," he said earnestly. His right hand swooped down on one of her hands and squeezed it ecstatically.

"There!" she said to herself, with a gasp, as they swung around and started backward in the face of a glorious sunset. "I knew all along he was just that sort!"

But she didn't seem to care.

A Frog to the Rescue.

One day a couple of my friends were sitting on the river bank when they heard the cry of a frog in distress, says the Woman's Home Companion. Following the direction from which the sound came, they discovered a snake in the act of swallowing a frog.

Just then another frog, evidently attracted by the distressing cries of its mate in jeopardy, hopped up to the scene of action. For a moment it sat blinking at the enemy; then leaped forward, seized the snake by the neck and tugged it into the river.

The water quickly poured between the snake's distended jaws, and it was, of course, compelled to release its victim in order to escape drowning. This it promptly did, and the liberated frog swam away with its plucky mate, while the baffled snake wriggled, as best it could, to the shore.

The Home.

To remove the squeak from a wicker chair or settee, chalk the parts upon which the friction falls.

Cane-seated chair bottoms that have sagged may be made as tight as ever by washing them with hot water and leaving to dry in the open air.

If a bedstead creaks at each move of the sleeper remove the slats and wrap the ends of each in old newspaper. This will prove a complete silence.

Varnish and paint stains in coarse fabrics can be removed by first saturating with turpentine and then washing. Ivory knife handles that have become yellow can be restored to their former whiteness by rubbing with turpentine.

To prepare feathers for pillows place the feathers in a large tub and pour over them two pounds of quicklime thoroughly dissolved in two gallons of water. The feathers should be allowed to remain in the tub five days.

To clean the inside of the cookstove soak some corncobs in coal oil. Place two or three cobs under the top lids and under the oven, then close dampers and light the cobs. They will burn the soot out clean. A damp day is the best time, as then danger of fire is less.

Iron rust, it is said, may be removed by tying a little cream of tartar in the stained spot before putting the article to boil. If this does not succeed, thicken lemon juice with equal parts of salt and starch, add some soft soap, apply the mixture to the cloth, and lay it in the hot sun. If the first application does not remove the spots, repeat until they have entirely disappeared.

If there is any fear that a bed not usually slept on is damp, put a bright looking-glass between the sheets and cover it up. In a few minutes examine it. If its surface is dimmed there is cause for uneasiness. If a bright looking-glass is not at hand a tumbler warmed and turned upside down will answer the same purpose.

To clean a library properly one should have a real reverence for books. After the furniture is all removed from the room and the floor has received the attention to be given it, then turn to the books. Take one shelf at a time. Wipe each book as it is removed from the shelf; with this brush the tops, sides and bottom of the books. Be very particular to replace the volumes in the proper order. Nothing exasperates a book lover more than to have well-arranged shelves mixed up by house-cleaning methods.

CHILD'S FROCK OF BATISTE.

The square yoke is made with groups of tucks and Valenciennes insertion, as is also the little double skirt. The short, puffed sleeves, with their caps and frills, are also trimmed with Valenciennes lace and insertion.

White Coats in Vogue.

White coats are much in vogue. They are usually made in the three-quarter length, and many of them have collars and cuffs of some bright tint. Alpaca, serge and linen are the favored materials. Coats of alpaca are seen with linen collar and cuffs of corn flower blue, green or rose pink. Long traveling coats are worn in white or gray, finished with collar, cuffs and revers of embroidery, while short, close-fitting white coats are coming in, also made of linen or alpaca. Some of these show collars and cuffs of the same fabric as the coat, daintily embroidered with colored thread.

Odd Flower Basket.

An odd type of basket of foreign design, which is used as a receptacle for steamer gifts of flowers, is described as "half basket and half demijohn" by a Brooklyner who received one this summer. The flowers are put into it with the blooms filling out the spherical top and the stems going down into the long handle. Half of the spherical top lifts back on wicker hinges, and the flowers may thus be easily arranged. There is a handle on top. This sort of basket is intended principally for long-stemmed roses.

SUGGESTIONS FOR NOVEL AND PLEASING ENTERTAINMENTS.

Innovation at a Recent Boston Wedding—Lottery Bag Game Amusing to Both Grown-Ups and Children—Malzepp Party.

A Bridal Breakfast.

A recent Boston bride carried out the wedding bell idea in a most effective manner. A cluster of five bells, made of wire and covered with ferns, were suspended over the dining-room table by white satin ribbons. The rings of the bells were of white carnations, the clappers were of white rosebuds. At each plate the guests found their names inscribed on white cards decorated with a hand-painted spray of maiden hair ferns and in the upper left hand corner a tiny bell was tied with a bow of white ribbon. These bells may be purchased by the dozen or hundred, and are called costume bells.

A Lottery Bag.

This is a game enjoyed by children or grown ups, and proves an entertaining feature for a party. Provide a large vase, with a neck which will admit the hand, or a bag with a draw string. Fill this receptacle with peanuts. Pass slips of paper to the guests and ask them to write down the number of nuts, which they think they will draw out in one hand-ful.

Each takes a turn, and then puts down the actual number drawn out. The one who comes the nearest to the first number receives a prize, and the person furthest away from the original guess receives a consolation prize. Serve salted peanuts, the "jumbo" variety, peanut butter sandwiches, a salad and peanut ice cream.

Peanuts strung with beads make effective portieres. For people who really like peanuts, a soup made by adding the crushed milk to a cream soup is very delicious, and serves it as a first course in bouillon cups.

A Malzepp Party.

The very latest invention for autumn entertainments is the "Malzepp" party. It has an exceedingly novel sound, but it is only the English for "popcorn."

Just recently our popcorn has been introduced into England by two enterprising Americans under the name of "Malzepp," and is being received with great acclaim. In consequence, our popcorn has taken a decided rise in article circles.

Send out the invitations in green crepe paper ears of corn. For decorations the red and white ears of corn hang in festoons over grills and doorways are very effective. Pass each guest an ear of corn with a wooden plate, such as greenups use, let them shell and count the grains, keeping account of the number, then pour the contents into a large receptacle. Each person makes a guess as to the number, the one coming nearest gets a prize.

Then have popcorn for a snack, and some shelled popcorn. When a good shelled bowl is popped, give each a needle and thread with ribbons of different colors, a half-inch in width. The girls make watch chains for the men, and the men make necklaces for the girls by sewing grains of popcorn to the ribbon. Partners are found for refreshment or for whatever contest the hostess has provided by matching a necklace and ribbon.

For refreshments serve a cream corn soup, cornmeal gem, bowls of mush with cream, parched, salted and buttered corn, instead of nuts.

TO PERPETUATE MEMORY OF ROBERT FULTON

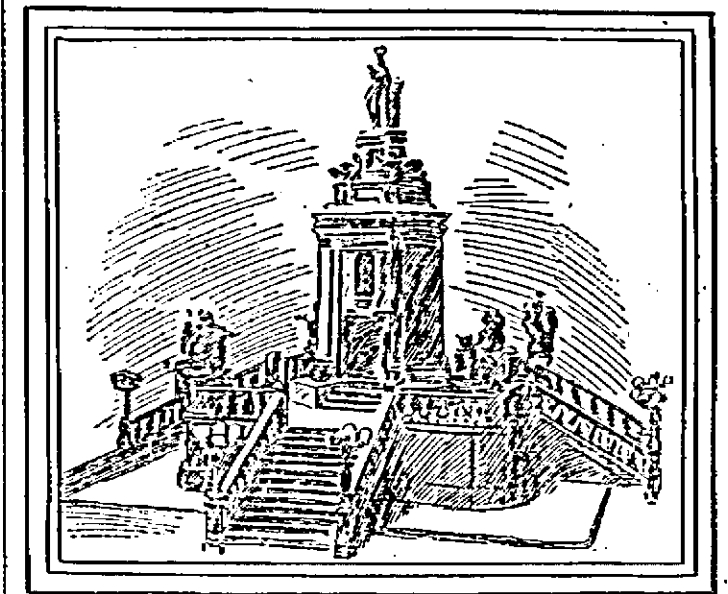

Bronze and Marble Monument to be Erected on the Banks of Hudson Where First Steamboat Was Run.

Just 100 years ago next August, Robert Fulton, after many years of effort, succeeded in making his trip on the Hudson in his famous steam-driven ship, the Clermont. The story of the birth of steamboat navigation is one filled with the rivalries and jealousies of inventors who had for years been struggling with the problem of the application of steam to navigation of ships, and the controversy as to who was the original inventor of steam navigation has been thrashed over and over from that time to this.

But however strong the claims of Rumsey, who tried a steam-driven vessel upon the Potomac, in 1783, or John Fitch, or Patrick Miller, or Nathan Reed, or even Robert L. Stevens, who navigated a paddle-wheel steamer on the Hudson only a few days after the successful trip of Fulton, it has been practically conceded that Robert Fulton is entitled to the credit for

As a boy Fulton was filled with the idea of boats and boat propulsion, and at the age of 13 he had constructed paddle-wheels which he applied with success to a fishing boat. He had a strong artistic bent, and several years of his young manhood were spent in painting miniature portraits, landscapes, etc., besides making mechanical and architectural drawings. At the age of 21 he went to London, where he practiced his art, and it was there that he began his experiments in mechanics under the patronage of various wealthy persons with whom his art work had brought him in touch. He patented a mill for sawing marble, and later made plans for the construction of cast iron aqueducts, and a great work of this kind was built across the river Doo.

He also patented in England a machine for spinning flax, a dredging machine, a market or passage boat, a dispatch boat, and a trader, and the first practical application of steam as a propelling power for vessels.

That the memory of the great inventor may be perpetuated, the Robert Fulton Monument Association proposes to erect on the banks of the Hudson a marble and bronze monument to cost $500,000. The clay model of the monument has been completed and approved, and now all that remains to be done is to raise the necessary money. The design embodies the broadest ideas of the results of Fulton's invention, the idea being that all industries have been developed with more or less rapidly through the application of steam to navigation, and that through the same agency the four quarters of the earth have been brought together in commerce and intercourse.

the Clermont, surmounting a shaft in which is supposed to be a winding staircase to the observation landing. At the base of the shaft are groups of figures representing the various spheres of human industry, and the corners of the base are ornamented with ethnological groups.

Then, in other words, the four corners of the globe. The materials to be used in its construction are white marble and bronze.

The story of Robert Fulton's struggle with the problem of steam navigation is an interesting one, his earlier attempts proving failures, as did those of numerous other inventors at work on the same problem.

Naturally She Was Surprised.

"Why, papa," said the fair girl, "wasn't that singular?"

"Wasn't what singular?" the old gentleman asked, as he examined the railway tickets which he had just purchased.

phibitions boat, as it was called, to be used on canals. His treatise on the improvement of Canal Navigation, written about this time, received wide circulation, and a copy was sent to the president of the United States by the author.

Soon after this Fulton returned to the United States and continued his experiments with torpedoes, and the government appropriated $5,000 for the testing of his torpedoes and submarine explosives.

As early as 1793 Fulton had turned his attention to steam navigation, but it was not until ten years later that his efforts took any tangible shape. Then with the financial assistance of Chancellor Livingston, he launched a steamboat on the Seine, which, owing to faulty construction of the frame, immediately sank. Another boat was built, with the old machinery, and a trial trip was made, but no great speed was attained.

However, encouraged by this partial success, Fulton ordered an engine to be sent to the United States, and returned to this country to continue his experiments. Early in the spring of 1807 the boat which was to navigate the Hudson, and especially the system of steam navigation, was completed at a ship yard on the East river. The engine was put in later, and on August 11, of that year, the Clermont steamed up the Hudson to Albany, the voyage occupying 32 hours. Thus was the world given the first steamboat of practical value, and the credit and honor for the great achievement are undoubtedly due to Robert Fulton.

For this reason it seems fitting that the centennial of that notable achievement should be marked by the erection of a monument to the great inventor. At the Jamestown exposition next year it is planned to observe Robert Fulton day, when the names of the world will be represented in Hampton Roads, and a naval review surpassing anything yet seen will be witnessed. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who is the president of the monument association, will sail at the head of the ships of war in his yacht.

The design of the Fulton monument is by Leopold Brascny, and it is proposed to raise the sum necessary to its creation in marble and bronze in small subscriptions, and to place the names of all donors of ten dollars or more upon bronze tablets with which the inner walls of the tomb, where the remains of the inventor will rest, are to be lined.

Stinging.

The humorous writer smiled, for he enjoyed talking about his work, especially when the lady was pretty and young.

"How on earth," she remarked, "do you write ten jokes a day?"

"With a typewriter," rejoined the humorist, and his smile widened.

But she stared at him quizzically. "Oh," she said, "I thought you used some copying process."—Cassell's Journal.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

A Seranton Woman Tells How Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Made Her Well and Strong.

Nervous debility is the common name for what the doctors term neurasthenia. It is characterized by mental depression, fits of the "blues," or melancholy, loss of energy and spirits. The patient's eyes become dull, the pink fades from the cheeks, the memory becomes defective so that it is difficult to recall dates and names as well. Some of these symptoms may be prevented or all of them. The remedy lies in toning up the nervous system and there is no medicine better adapted for this purpose than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Jane J. Davies, of No. 314 Warren street, Seranton, Pa., says: "Some years ago I became greatly reduced in health and strength, and my nervous system became so debilitated that I felt wretched. I could not rest or sleep well at night and woke up with weary and languid in the morning as I was when I went to bed. My head ached in the morning and often there was a pain in my right side which was worse when I sat down. My nerves were on edge all the time, very little noise bothered me and I was generally miserable. Then I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, as my husband had taken them with good results, and they did wonders for me. Now I have no more pain in my side, no more headaches, I sleep well and feel strong and able to do my work."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Mrs. Davies and they can do just as much for other weak, pale, ailing men or women who are slipping into a hopeless decline. They strike straight at the root of all common diseases caused by poor and impoverished blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

THE HISTORY OF POLICEMAN FLYNN

HE STOPS AN AUTOMOBILE.

"Whoa!" cried Policeman Flynn. "Whoa, I tell ye! Stop!"

The man with the automobile slowed up, and finally came to a full stop.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

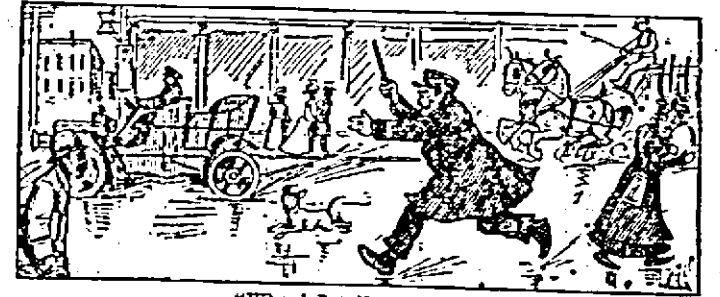

"Matter?" ejaculated Policeman Flynn. "Dye think this is a speedin'-tra-ack? Ha-ave ye th' idee that th' people on th' cross-walks is hur-ries, an' that 't is fr ye to show th' kind of a jockey ye are? Are ye th' opinion that ye're doin' th' ch'arge fr th' Light Brigade all be ye-enill? I'll ha-ave no automobile goin' out after th' record where I'm wearin' a po-lis badge."

"This ha's an automobile," asserted the man who had been stopped. "I can't afford anything so aristocratic as that. This is only a horseless carriage."

"May-be 't is so," returned Policeman Flynn, "but 't is w-rong ye are if ye think this is a copless bootleg; an' if ye persist in statin' th' la-aw, I'll run ye in, I will that."

"I'm violating no law," replied the man, in a quiet tone.

"Oh! ye think ye're smar-rt, don't ye?" exclaimed Policeman Flynn. "Ye'd go to shplitin' hairs with a po-lis-man an' thryin' to come over him with th' ol' joke. I'm coorse ye're vilitatin' no la-aw now. Fr why? Fr because I stopped ye. 'T is not th' likes fr ye that can throw down Barney Flynn on that gas."

"Whoa! I tell ye! Stop!"

"But I haven't been violating any law," insisted the man.

"Ye ha-ave'n't!" cried Policeman Flynn, his breath fairly taken away by the calm assertion. "Ye-ha-ave'n't! Oh, no, I coorse ye ha-ave'n't. Ye've only been cr-reepin' along like ye was pushin' a ha-by's go-cart. Why, ye gayleen engineer, ye've been makin' twinty miles an hour."

"What of it?" asked the man. "There's no law against it."

"Sa-ay," cautioned Policeman Flynn, with a solemn shake of his head. "A joke's a joke, an' I can't a-ake with th' 'er' man, an' don't be after pushin' me too far, or I'll ha-ave ye before th' po-lis court, I will so."

"On what charge?" demanded the man.

"Fr fast drivin'," answered Policeman Flynn.

"I haven't been driving fast," asserted the man. "I haven't been driving at all. The law says ridin' or driving any horse or horse or other animals, and that doesn't affect me."

Policeman Flynn scratched his head. He wasn't sure that the ordinance was correctly quoted, but neither was he prepared to deny it. It certainly sounded right.

"Lick at that, now!" he said at last. "Tis like thim gamboos that makes th' la-aw fr to have a ch'ance fr th' man that vilitates th' to a-ake out fr it. Here I am thryin' to do th' job, an' no ch'ance fr anything but th' worst fr it, whate'er I do. Th' la-aw is made fr th' good people, but 't is read to th' coorts fr th' other ways. If th' la-aw is a hole in it, th' lawyer sticks a crow-bar in, an' th' judge gives a bit of help, an' bech'ne th' two th' make a th' o'pin' big enough fr to put a locomotive injine through. If I've had th' ma-akin' fr th' la-aw I'd ha-ave first fr all in th' big book a sentence readin' like this: 'Th' la-aw hereinafter what they make, an' not what they sa-ay.' Tis th' only way, fr now when a man draws up a la-aw he knows what he's after, an' everybody else knows what he's after, but th' coort takes two fa-alls out fr it, an' he gets what he doesn't want, or else th' la-aw is broke into rna-alls bits."

"Well," remarked the man with the automobile, "if you're through talking to yourself I'll move along."

"Not so fa-ast," interposed Policeman Flynn. "Ye may be r-right an' ye may be w-rong, but th' way is plain I want settled. Dye think to keep down to th' la-aw speed?"

"There is no lawful speed for me," answered the man defiantly. "I can go as fast as I want to."

"M-m-m, now," said Policeman Flynn to himself, as he drew his hand thoughtfully across his chin. "I wish I had a good woman here fr to tell me what to do. 'Tis a mighty puzzlin' thing; but," he added, addressing the man with the automobile, "if ye're goin' to ma-ake th' pe-destrans give exhibitions fr gr-round an' loffy temblin', I'll take th' chanst an' r-run ye in."

"Come on," returned the man, making room for the officer on the seat beside him.

Policeman Flynn hesitated for a moment, and then climbed up.

"Go show," he cautioned, "or 't will be th' wor-ree fr ye."

"You don't suppose I'm going to take myself to the station, do you?" returned the man. "You'll have to take me."

"Iv coorse I'll take ye," said Policeman Flynn. "Tis fr that I'm here, Gwan, caw."

"Keep ye-r ha-ands off, I'll not have ye do it."

"If you won't run it and you won't let me, what are we going to do?"

"It was hard problem, and Policeman Flynn looked puzzled.

"I wish th' good woman was here," he sighed. "Tis a fine thing I've been doin' to me-sell, an' me an of man on th' force. M-m-m, well, I'll take ye without th' automobile."

"Somebody may run away with it," protested the man, in alarm.

"I'll a-ake th' risk," said Policeman Flynn. "Gwan, now! Out ye go!"

"Say," returned the man, wincing, "just call it all off, and I'll promise to keep within the lawful rate of speed for horses."

"Ye will?"

"Sure."

"Give me ye-r ca-ard, so's I'll know where to find ye if ye're lyin' to me." The man handed over a card, and Policeman Flynn jumped to the ground.

"Gwan, now," he said, and when the man had turned a corner he drew a long breath and muttered to himself: "He had me worried, he did that. Oh! 'tis a fine picture I'd make ma-arin' him off an' 'avin' th' automobile fr th' la-aws to play with! 'Twas a gr-reat bluff I put up, but, thank Hivin! it ha-anded him."

Native Question.

Mrs. Alexander, the novelist, lives in Florence. There a young American woman recently interviewed her.

"Mrs. Alexander was delightful," said the young woman. "She amused me very much. I, too, amused her—she thought me naive."

"Once, when I asked her a certain question about the financial side of novel writing, she declared that my question was as naive as that of a little Florentine child's that she had heard about the day before."

"The child, at dinner with her parents, turned to her mother and said: 'Mamma, where were you born?'"

"At Padua, darling."

"But I was born in Florence, wasn't I?"

"Yes, dear."

"And father, where was he born?"

"In Venice."

"The little girl looked gravely from one to the other."

"Isn't it funny," she said, "that we should all have met like this?"

LITTLE MEN and Little WOMEN.

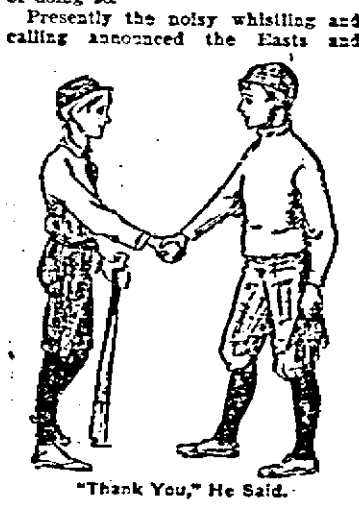

BOB CASE'S TRIUMPH.

Story of a Cripple's Dream That Came True.

Baseball was in the air. And no wonder, for it was the afternoon of the great game between the Easts and the Wests, rival teams who for generations of Hillside boys had battled hard against each other. A low-lying common a short distance from the town had always been the field of action.

Bobby Case, a cripple, was the first boy on the diamond. He walked from base to base and lovingly touched them with his foot. He was discouraged. "Gee, I wish I could play just once. It's such a bully day, too," he said. He then looked across the field. Not a boy was in sight, and he gave a sigh of relief. How ashamed he would have been to have let the fellows know he had come early just to touch the bases. Bobby had never expressed a wish to the boys that he wanted to play ball, or even dreamed of doing so.

Presently the noisy whistling and calling announced the Easts and West and their respective admirers. The opposing teams were well matched. Enthusiasm reigned supreme. But Bobby sat silent on the fence. He was called "hon. sah" for the Easts. There was a little argument, and the game started. The Wests had scored and the Easts had failed. Then the Easts held first place, and then by some mysterious chance the game became a tie.

"If I could play just once," thought poor Bobby.

It was Jim's turn to bat. The boy's freckled face was flushed with excitement; he understood that so much depended upon him. He grasped the old worn bat firmly in his dirty hands. He paused, then, strangely attracted toward Bobby, he looked at the little fellow. The longing in the boy's face stirred within Bobby's heart a deep understanding that startled him in its intensity. He dropped the bat, and held out his hands toward the boys.

"Boys," he said, "I can't bat. And say, let Bob Case bat in my place."

There was a deep silence. Such a thing had never before happened in the annals of Hillside's baseball history. The game tie! Did the law at last allow such a queer thing?

"Why?" stammered the captain of the Easts.

"Oh, Bobby can bat," replied Jim, wondering at his audacity in the face of possible defeat. "I've seen him bat, heaps of times, practicing in his back yard." And this was true. "I say, fellows, he's a sub; so it's all square, you know."

"Your arm tired?" jeered the Wests' bleachers.

In the meantime Bobby sat, confused, on the fence. He was strangely happy to know that he had even been considered by Jim, for he had no hope that his wish could be gratified.

"I'll risk Bobby," continued Jim. "Please, fellows, say 'yes' I'll run for him, too."

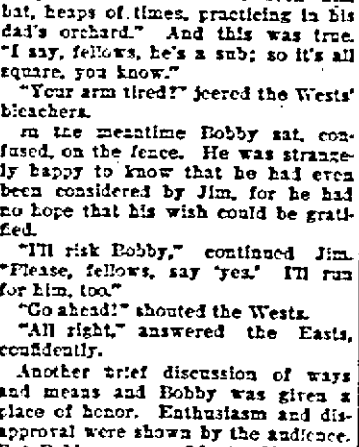

"Go ahead!" shouted the Wests.

"All right," answered the Easts, confidentially.

Another brief discussion of ways and means and Bobby was given a place of honor. Enthusiasm and approval were shown by the audience. But Bobby was confident. He would show his comrades his worth. He assumed the air of a professional, even though it was his first public appearance.

"Let her go!" he called.

One strike, one ball—two balls, three balls, two strikes. Bobby was still alert and confident. The bleachers became suddenly interested. One of the boys called out: "Casey at the bat!" then the others echoed the words. This encouraged Bobby; it was like his dream. Then Jim said he could bat. The pitcher paused, measuring his opponent. Then Bobby hit. Such a ball—nothing like it in the annals of the Easts' history. Jim

The automobile is a perfect toy, and simple of construction. It is made of a pasteboard box, the wheels being of cardboard, and the axles two knitting needles. The piece of elastic furnishes the propelling power, as shown in diagram in the upper right-hand corner of the picture.

To set the toy in motion, wind up the rear wheel until the elastic underneath becomes quite taut, then set the automobile upon the floor, when it will travel rapidly the length of the room or piazza.

The greatest fun, however, may be had by placing the auto on the floor and then giving it a sharp push so as to send it the whole length of the room. The auto then returns to the player.

The motive power of both toys shown here is an elastic wax fastened by means of sealing wax to the axle.

The toy may be put in motion by winding the rear wheel, or it may be pushed across the floor, in which case, it may be seen, the revolutions of the axle cause the elastic to be

As to Hissing.

Hissing a presidential candidate in a state convention does not necessarily destroy his prospects. The source and motive of the hissing are to be considered. Also the fact that in the animal kingdom hissing chiefly emanates from snakes and geese. Added distinction for the individual hissed may be the result. To be hated for fidelity to a great principle sometimes proves in the long run as advantageous as to be applauded for desertion of that principle. At all events, the hissing of an eminent public officer who has contributed to his own state as much renown as any other man living or dead cannot be said to testify to either the good manners or the good sense of the hissing.

The late Robert R. Hitt had a knowledge of stenography which was of great value to him in debate. He was the patron saint of the stenographers of the house. Not long ago political influence was about to displace from the line of promotion a young expert writer of shorthand from Michigan whose work Mr. Hitt had occasion to admire. Mr. Hitt went to Speaker Cannon. "This will never do, Joe," said the shorthand authority of the house. "We can't do without this man. The house must have him." "All right, Hitt," replied Speaker Cannon. "If anybody knows the sort of stenographers this house ought to have you are the man." That settled it and the Michigan stenographer held his place.

My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to the itchy parts of my body and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured, and my hair stopped falling out. PENNIES FOR A COLLEGE.

One Hundred Thousand Workers Each Give a Penny to Ruskin College.

The British trade unions had not in their origin any direct concern with education, says the Fortnightly Review. But it is a fact of no ordinary significance that some of the leading unions should be taking very great interest in the higher education of the workman.

For the last three years some 100,000 workmen, members of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, have made three series of one penny each to help on the work of Ruskin college at Oxford. This levy produces over £200 a year, and by means of it six engineers are maintained for a year's course of study at the college.

Smaller but substantial sums have been contributed to the same institution by the London Society of Compositors, by the Lankashire Miners' County Union, by the Amalgamated Association of Bankers, Twistlers and Drawers, by the Derbyshire miners and the Durham miners, while a large number of other societies appear among the donors and subscribers.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused It to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estes, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for already before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until today Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of the mother of a large family, the W. J. Bryan, when he comes to Wisconsin, Oct. 15th, will make three speeches; one at Janesville in the morning; at Watertown in the afternoon and Madison in the evening.

The citizens of Rhinelander are delighted at the reappearance of Rev. Richard Evans to the pastorate of the M. E. Church for the ensuing year. Although Mr. Evans has been with us but one year, irrespective of denomination, he has become one of us. In all public enterprises he is ready to shoulder both his share of responsibility and work, and this city welcomes such men as residents.

The Northwestern R. R. is going to build a mammoth station at Chicago at a cost of $20,000,000. The new building will be erected on the square between Canal and Clinton Streets and Madison and Lake Streets. As Chicago is the metropolis of this R. R. system, it has been given out that the proposed terminal will be comparable in magnificence to the work under way by R. R.'s in New York and Washington.

CHICAGO GLEE CLUB.

The first entertainment of the Star Course of Entertainments, occurred Monday evening at the Congregational Church, which in spite of the stormy night was well filled. From the first number The Chicago Glee Club held the enthusiastic attention of the audience. Each number was worthy of mention. Such a combination of voices is rarely found in a quartette and it was soon learned that singing was not the only accomplishment of the quartette; they were actors as well, as Mr. Dixon's Hoosier impersonations proved. The sliding trombone numbers were a novelty not often heard and were much enjoyed.

The whole entertainment was one of the best things ever given in Rhinelander and the repeated encores showed the appreciation of the audience. The management of the Star Course deserves the greatest credit and patronage in attempting to secure such a high grade of entertainments as their opening number proved and as their booklets indicate the others will be.

STATE CAMPAIGN OPENED.

Gov. Cummins of Iowa opened the Wis. campaign at the Palat Theatre, Milwaukee, last Saturday evening. One peculiar feature of this opening is that Governor Cummins stands in about the same position in his own state today that Robert M. La Follette stood in Wisconsin two years ago. He has served as governor of Iowa two terms and was renominated at the Iowa Republican convention for a third term against all the efforts of the corporate interests. He was introduced by Governor Davidson and put forth tariff revision and corporation regulation as the principal issues of the Republican party during the fall campaign, and praised Wisconsin for her leadership upon the vital questions.

Before the speech at 6 p. m. at the Flakinton House, Milwaukee, over 200 Republicans languished with Chairman Connor as presiding officer. This group included many former opponents side by side and a large number of candidates for state offices. It was surely a great meeting for the opening of the campaign.

The Fuel Question

The Round Oak Furnace

Every one who has a house to heat is interested in any method to cut down fuel expenses, or to get more heat from the same amount of fuel.

accomplishes this in four different ways, any one of which would make a very noticeable difference.

- 1st. There is no waste heat—all the heat furnished is sent into the house.
- 2nd. It will hold a uniform fire—free or raging hot—longer than any other.
- 3rd. It will keep the house warm all the time—never allowing it to become cold at night and so doubling its work the next day.
- 4th. It burns all the gases and smoke which is equivalent to more fuel.

Write for our free descriptive book "Warmth and Comfort." Heating plans furnished free of charge, giving proper location of furnace, of cold and warm air intake, size of pipes and all details.

F. E. MCGOVERN INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE.

F. E. McGovern, present District Attorney of Milwaukee County, who has served but one term in office, has decided to run as an independent candidate in spite of the fact that Mr. Boden defeated him at the primaries.

Mr. McGovern's friends claim that many Rose Democrats sacrificed their own ticket to vote for Boden and defeat McGovern Sept. 4th, and the wishes of the law abiding people are in favor of McGovern's renomination and re-election that he may continue convicting the criminals now indicted. The records show that McGovern has convicted a large number of criminals during his term of office. The opponents of McGovern cite the indictment of Pfister and failure to convict him as an illustration of Mr. McGovern's work. In all great cases there are a few exceptions. Mr. McGovern seems to have a strong following of good citizens, we shall watch his independent candidacy with much interest.

Read About Indians and Outdoor Life.

It costs but the postage required to mail it. It will be sent to any address for six cents. The book is "Wonderland 1906" published by the Northern Pacific Railway, and is for general distribution. Send six cents to A. M. Cleveland, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minnesota or as many times six cents as you wish copies, with proper address, and the little volume will be promptly forwarded by that gentleman. Don't wait! The book has an object to educate and inform the public about the Northwest, the region that Lewis and Clark explored and made known to us. Help it perform its mission. 27-111.

MR. A. E. HUGNER,

Kinsland, Wis.

DEAR SIX:—Your business is when house burns down, to give the owner some money to build a new one. It is a good business. Queer that the world got on so long without it.

We paint the one that burnt down and the new one too. What is better, we paint the houses that don't burn down.

You insure the houses that burn; we insure the houses that don't. You have the ashes and the smoke; all the houses are ours.

We paint lead and zinc; Devco. We do the paint to painters; we do not paint. Lead-and-zinc is the old fashion paint. Devco is zinc ground in with lead and linseed oil; the best paint in the world; and the cheapest, because it takes fewer gallons than mixed paints and it wears twice as long as lead-and-zinc. Nobody wants poor paint; there's lots of it, though, in the world.

A. M. Griffin, Plainfield, N. J. writes: "Mr. Aaron Hixson, of Plainfield, always used 15 gallons of mixed paint for his house. Last spring he bought 15 gallons of Devco and had 4 gallons left."

Yours truly

F. W. Devco & Co.

Wounds, Bruises and Burns.

By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, they may be healed without maturation and in about one-third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery and triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any danger of blood poisoning. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering such injuries entail. For sale by

Anderle & Hinman.

An Awful Cough Cured.

"Two years ago our little girl had a touch of pneumonia, which left her with an awful cough. She had spells of coughing, just like one with the whooping cough and some thought she would not get well at all. We got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which acted like a charm. She stopped coughing and got stout and fat," writes Mrs. Ora Bussard, Brubaker, Ill. This remedy is for sale by

Anderle & Hinman.

After long consideration where to locate upon leaving this town on account of my ill health, I have at last decided on a locality in the West. I wish to thank the people of this City and County for their loyal patronage for the last 17 years I have been in business here and as I built up my trade on the principle "Nothing but the best for the lowest price possible" you all know by experience that nothing but First-Class Merchandise has ever left this house. As I intend to go in as short a time as possible I have gone through my entire stock again and have marked down the goods still lower as I am determined to leave everything right among my old friends thus giving them a chance to buy their needs in wearing apparel at such low prices that it will make them remember me for years to come, and this my last sale will be one of the events in the history of the City of Rhinelander. Everything in this sale as represented or money cheerfully refunded. Again thanking you for your loyal patronage and hoping to see you all during this sale, I am
